

Rattleback Celt Reaction to Aether which is the Basic Unit of Energy (BUE)

7-05-2018

Aether is electrons that are free in the universe. These are light particles and the static we collect on our bodies and they are electricity and the path of lightning and create all magnetic flux. Every electronic interaction happens in the aether.

These aether particles are among the smallest of all particles. I will call these BUEs and they are “Basic Units of Energy”. The tiny electron center of a BUE is surrounded by an exclusion zone that is energetic. Like a balloon around a grain of sand the BUE bounces into and away from other BUEs which permeate the Universe and all matter is coated with BUEs. Even in solid conductors these BUEs flow and push as electric current.

As BUES impact with other BUE electrons (especially in complete matter) they increase in energetic value. This is similar to a 5PSI balloon crushed into another 5PSI balloon and the impact creates balloons with a larger PSI as they compress into each others region that they occupied prior to compression. They then react oppositely to the applied force and that can be heat or light or electric current. All energy is electronic impact or pushing or electronic molecular rearrangement (chemical) from bonding or dissociation.

The nature of aether changes according to its location.

Aether in the vacuum of space is light that is in transit. It is electron particles BUEs thrown from violent molecular interactions in luminous bodies like our Sun. These particles are dark and non reactive in space because they have no complete matter to impact with.

Light particles carry a negative charge and they stay away from each other in space. John Glenn saw these and called them “Fireflies”. Glenn said they stay 7 to 8 feet apart. This is his report as he flew into sunrise and the particles become highlighted.

“I’m in a big mass of thousands of very small particles that are brilliantly lit up like they’re luminescent,” Glenn told mission control on Canton Island. “They are bright yellowish-green. About the size and intensity of a firefly on a real dark night. I’ve never seen anything like it.”
He went on to describe the phenomena:

“They swirl around the capsule and go in front of the window and they’re all brilliantly lighted. They probably average maybe 7 or 8 feet apart, but I can see them all down below me, also. ... They’re very slow; they’re not going away from me more than maybe 3 or 4 miles per hour. They’re going at the same speed I am approximately. They’re only very slightly under my speed. Over. They do, they do have a different motion, though, from me because they swirl around the capsule and then depart back the way I am looking.”

John Glenn was then in the Ionosphere where these BUEs collect. These same particles were also seen just as the Sun rose during the NASA tether incident in 1996.

What are BUEs and what is their nature?

Understanding that all the universe is filled with these little BUEs that are like balloons and all matter contains them as electrons in orbitals and all matter is coated with them leads to some principles.

1st BUEs free in the vacuum of space do not travel at set speeds. They travel according to the velocity of discharge from the excited matter. There will be a minimum speed (unknown) that is like escape velocity and must exceed the pull of the discharging bodies mass.

2nd BUEs stay apart from each other in the vacuum because they are repelled as they are all negative charged particles with a field that the particle owns and as described by Glenn as 7 to 8 feet apart and the actual particles were seen and captured in this video by Nasa. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ujcSwuRBXRc&t=146s>

3rd Earths core is a strong positive pull and as more and more matter accumulates (in larger bodies) the positive pull increases until black hole pull is achieved. Black hole pull is so strongly positive that nothing negative can escape. Everything in the Universe contains negative charges as free electrons or orbiting electrons. Therefore every single thing is attracted to complete matter. Even as negative particles flood the complete matters positives and greatly exceed the positive charge, the positive pull of the core continues to attract negatives and they collect in a ring called the ionosphere. This simple toy demonstrates the positive pull holding electrons in orbits like a tractor beam.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=bRDKOcfrI-Y&t=63s> This explains quantum and gravity and dark matter and energy. 1...the magnet is suspended at a quantum distance regulated by the cores positive attractiveness. 2... Electrons (on everything and free) are pulled to complete matter due to the positive core in complete matter. That is gravity. Electrons are pulled to matter out of the (dark energy light) which is the aether of space. When they impact it is heat and light as they crush into others regions and get energetic. In celestial objects matter containing electrons is pulled together and large bodies are drawn magnetically together and some impact violently. All these things are seen.

4th There are no positive “Surfaces”. All matter is surrounded by electrons in orbits and all space is full of traveling BUE electrons. Therefore all impacts are electron to electron (neg to neg). This repulsive interaction creates energy. The equation is possibly Energy = Mass. Mass is the weight at impact and has many variables like speed of approaching impactor...movement of target....weight of resting particle... linear and angular momentum... all add up to the mass which is simply how hard the particle collides and that is its energy.

5th Understanding surfaces is critical here. We know there are no positives sticking out of any matter. Electrons surround every atom and molecule and are also the free electrons as light and static which is aether and can flow. However on surfaces there is a cloud of adhered electrons that do not flow easily because they are part of the solid matter. That cloud of electrons which is adhered to the surface interacts with the air touching it which also is 100% negative electrons of gases or aether. This creates negative to negative zones but not firmly attached to the electrons of the surface which are held firmly. The net affect is to create friction as these two layers rub or crush and repel each other. This layer is responsible for celt rattleback behavior I believe as these surfaces interact and push or pull according to the right hand rule of electron spin. <https://courses.lumenlearning.com/boundless-physics/chapter/magnetic-force-on-a-moving-electric-charge/>

6th ... The hard part is understanding the basic particles propensity to have spin preference. In light experiments with Rod Warren I was able to see what appears to be the BUE up close and it has a duality of power regions as seen in dark and white areas on the particle in this video. This video shows Velikovsky was correct and Einstein was not. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=rjS-Jl1mFwI&t=170s>

7th ...As a result of Einsteins speed limit mandate nothing in physics or space or cosmology is correct. Hubble was forced to say the Universe is expanding when its obvious light is simply slowing down. This is not in question because now with better telescopes we see light farther away which is so slow now that according to Hubble planets exceed light speed. Its simply completely wrong from the start. And please explain this with current cosmology. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=zgwUvD2Torkd>

Conclusion...

Physics and energy and space and light and gravity and all atomic molecular energy is completely misunderstood now. Aether explains 100% of the unexplained and I will gladly engage with anyone that can present credible evidence as presented here. Do not come with old foolish Einstein nonsense please...address the factual evidence presented. This is a request for peer review gone unanswered for years. Adherence to dogma destroyed science for over 100 years. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=tS1DbARv9uk&t=535s>
