

Bohr Model Replaced by Electrons only which are Dipoles and are all that exists

I was exposed to Metallurgy as my father was General Manager of Allegheny Ludlum Special Alloys Division "Super Metals". I briefly worked for GE rebuilding Electric motors and Generators so large they came in on flatbeds. In 1968 I went into the Army and worked on Nike Hercules sites.

In 1970 I studied atomic theory in great detail and realized a huge positive Nucleus and tiny little electrons (negative) around it simply did not work.

Subsequently I was the Field Service Manager for Walter Kidde Corp in Ct....when they owned Victor Business Machines. I was charged with diagnosing issues (which were many) and also training and procedures and was really fun. This was during the initial introduction to semiconductor devices...leds , diodes, transistors etc.

All my work in this field led me to the understanding that everything was literally like friction and push to shove of materials caused heat.... The harder you push into something the harder it shoves back. This creates GLOW due to electron to electron repulsion because in Electron Flood all surfaces are coated with the explosive white glowy particle known as an electron.

At very close distanceselectron to electron distances the surfaces repel each other (called the Casimir affect) unless one surface is electron poor and the other electron rich....sometimes they will mingle into a compound however that will usually also release heat as excess electrons.

I realized long ago that the Bohr model was simply impossible and the nucleus was a dipole but never understood how it was possible until the light experiments we did using a venturi....about 2015.

I then saw some salt vibration experiments and some tractor beam magnet experiments and my own research all led to the dipole electron adding up to form what was always considered the Proton and Neutron however they are merely accumulations of electrons in a ball that is stable at certain quantities. Resonance frequencies are simply shaking the polar electrons into each other until they hit a certain frequency that is stable and a pattern forms that is geometric and has crystal characteristics at exact frequencies but fall apart as they exceed or lose particles in the crystal; structure...simply like a weak link.

If the ball (nucleus) has too many or too few electrons it will be less stable and called an "Isotope". Nuclear decay is simply balls of electrons (nuclei) becoming more or less stable by spitting out excess causing nuclear radiation. Big chunks of radiation are from UNATURAL events like atomic bombs as these are NOT particles that nature forms in mass.

At any rate the conclusion was that any quantity of electrons could exist as large or tiny nuclei as the mass crushed together for brief instants..... the mingle would be simply a debris field in these unnatural events like CERN and Atomic bombs create. Using photons proved simple and very clean events it seems from the results.

Rodney Warren accidentally created the venturi while experimenting using a pulsed red laser and two round pins instead of the razor thin slit. The rounded surfaces acted as a venturi just like an old fashion carburetor that "Atomized" gas particles so combustion was nearly complete.

Electrons are simply dipoles like salt grains and when shaken lock in to patterns at EXACT resonance stable frequencies which are quantities of electrons that form protons (1837 or so but uneven electrons) and Neutrons (1840 or so even # electrons). As stated Electrons are black and white balls...two attached up/down form photons.

This is a video on Muons etc. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=udx5wDft6Q0&t=3s>

In this video you will see light from a pulsed laser is like 2 bar magnets (particle) and creates a field (wave) as it goes forward. A simple venturi crushes the Bar Magnets fields and they display black/white balls.

The crush accelerates the particle then splits it. This creates the Muons (black balls) that will NOT stay with their white part due to the venturi and crushed fields. The result is Black ball Muons and White SPRAY called electron showers. They are the same particles Cern sees but we saw them attached and separated... because we started with PHOTONS which are billions of times smaller than the proton collider particles.

The images you see were taken by Rodney Warren (Australia and some were from Fabien Bouhier.) Fabien also enhanced some pics from Rod and did his own experiments as well. I did some myself but am not as talented as they are and I think I damaged one eye so I stopped as the results are so spectacular as to be unsurpassable anyway. I think as you will see the pictures are incredible and are from a simple cell phone and a very unique technique that was what I needed to show the dipole nature of light and electrons. BTW the black ball Muon is the source of PULL and does not emit so I think it is DARK MATTER and DARK ENERGY.

Roger Spurr

rspurr@gmail.com